

Function Meets Form

Does form follow function, or is it the other way around? At Gage Industries, the two don't compete; they converge. Here, in one of the country's largest custom thermoforming facilities, process continually intersects product and good design gets better all the time.

We begin each new project by asking questions: How can we expand your idea to deliver the best results for your application? What material choice will bring the greatest value to your product? Where can we use solid modeling and rapid prototyping to provide solutions?

As the Gage design team answers these fundamental questions of function, we shape new product into a form that is both elegant and lasting. We call it long-term customer satisfaction.
